Welcoming members back step by step

Richmond Club is continuing a staged roll out of its services in keeping with the State Government's relaxation of restrictions during the COVID19 pandemic.

On Monday, 1 June, staff were excited to welcome back members, who embraced the new routine of one-way entry and exit procedures, with temperature checks, hand sanitisation and social distancing.

CEO Kimberley Talbot said Richmond Club is following all infection control procedures outlined by NSW Health and working in conjunction with ClubsNSW to ensure its reopening operating plan is effective.

"We want to ensure we look after the health and safety of staff and members, particularly the aged and vulnerable," Ms Talbot said.

"We are glad to be open and offering services, albeit limited at this time, in a safe and controlled setting.

"Clubs are about community, social inclusion, entertainment, dining and having a good time out with family and friends.

"Many members have commented how good it is to be out and engaging with the community instead of being isolated at home.

Ms Talbot urged members to keep checking Facebook and the Richmond Club website for daily updates, as restrictions ease and regulations change, allowing the club to offer increasing services.

“We’re looking forward to the return of regular social club gatherings and bringing back live entertainment and shows when restrictions on movement are eased and dance floors can reopen,” Ms Talbot said.

The club has regulatory social distancing, strict cleaning schedules, sanitizer stations, temperature checks and all staff have been trained in COVID-19 infection control procedures.

“We also look forward to the future. It’s been very tough this year. Hopefully without COVID19 returning, we’re looking forward to 2020 being the year for the hotel to be approved to assist in tourism and economic development of the Hawkesbury.”
